ABSTRACT

This directory of migrant services contains over 1,270 entries covering national organizations, federal agencies, publishers, and state agencies and organizations. Each entry contains a variety of contact information, a contact person, and a short description of the organization or agency and the services offered. The first section presents national and multistate nongovernment organizations in three areas: advocacy, networking, and reform; research, development, technical assistance, and training; and funding and sponsorship. The second section lists federal departments and their offices or agencies relevant to migrant workers and their families: U.S. Department of Agriculture, U.S. Department of Education, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, U.S. Department of Justice, U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and the Social Security Administration. The third section presents publishers and producers of publications relevant to migrants. The fourth section covers relevant state government agencies and nongovernment organizations for every state, the District of Columbia, and U.S. territories. Also included are a list of acronyms, an eligibility matrix covering various federal programs and services, and an index. (SV)

Preface

The 2003 edition of the Migrant Services Directory: Organizations and Resources (in previous editions titled Directory of Services for Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers and Their Families: Harvests of Hope) was compiled in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Migrant Education. In addition to this print version, the directory is also available in searchable electronic and PDF editions at http://www.ael.org/ eric/. The searchable electronic edition will be continuously updated as readers notify us of needed changes and additional organizations. Single copies of the print edition will be available while supplies last, through the Department's EdPubs service by calling 877-433-7827 (TTY number, 877-576-7734) or by visiting the EdPubs Web site at http://www.ed.gov/pubs.

A number of people helped make this a successful project. First and foremost, Gaytha Jones, who worked diligently during the summer and fall of 2002 to compile the information; Lori Ahmady who responded to every request for information and advice; all the federal staffers and other members of the Migrant Interagency Group who provided information and detailed comments about the first draft; and several AEL staffers who proofread, researched, and performed other technological and exacting tasks: Jonathan Caldwell, Cindy Dawson, Robert Hagerman, Carla McClure, and Velma Mitchell.

Helps children and some adults get the nutrition and nutrition education they need to be healthy and develop healthy eating habits through the following programs: The National School Lunch Program provides nutritious lunches and snacks at free and reduced prices to low-income children while they are in school, in after-school care, or in summer school. The School Breakfast Program ensures that children get a healthy start each day with a nutritious breakfast at school. The Special Milk Program offers half pints of milk to children who do not have access to the meal programs. The Child and Adult Care Food Program extends meal service benefits to migrant children age 15 and younger in day care homes and centers, Head Start programs, outside-school-hours care centers, and homeless shelters. It provides snacks (and suppers in some states) to youth through age 18 in after-school care programs, and it also serves meals and snacks to impaired adults who receive adult day care. The Summer Food Service Program provides free meals and snacks to low-income children age 18 and younger during long school vacations. Establishing eligibility is easier, meal service times are more flexible, and extra meal benefits are available at sites serving migrant children. State agencies administer these programs, usually the state education department.

Assists migrant and seasonal farmworkers and their children who are 16 years of age or older to obtain a General Education Development (GED) certificate or the equivalent to a high school diploma and subsequently to gain employment in a career position or the military or entry into postsecondary education. Since most HEP programs are located at institutions of Higher Education (IHEs), migrant and seasonal farmworkers also have opportunities to attend cultural events, academic programs, and other educational and cultural activities usually not available to them. Serves more than 8,000 students annually. Competitive five-year grants for HEP projects are made to institutions of higher education or other nonprofit organizations that cooperate with such institutions.

Other Program Provisions	Priority for services must be given to children who are failing, or most at risk of failing to meet the State's content and achievement standards, AND whose education has been interrupted during the regular school year. Under certain conditions, participants can continue to receive services after their eligibility ends.	Students must be determined by the grantee to need the academic and supporting services and financial assistance provided by the project in order to attain the equivalent of a secondary school diploma and to gain employment or be placed in an IHE or other postsecondary education or training.	Students must be determined by the grantee to need the academic and supporting services and financial assistance provided by the project in order to complete an academic program of study at the IHE.	A family found eligible for services remains so until all family members become ineligible to participate (see the requirements under "Eligibility Period").	See the NFJP requirements. Required to coordinate with other programs serving migrant and seasonal farmworkers including those programs specified in the Act.	Former migratory workers who no longer meet the eligibility criteria because of age/disability and their families retain eligibility indefinitely or until adopting a new occupation.	Priority must be given to mobile families. Up to 10% of the children who are enrolled may be children from families that exceed the low-income guidelines. At least 10% of the total number of enrollment opportunities must be made available to children with disabilities.	Selective service registration is required for males born on or after January 1, 1960.
